The Magic Ship is a glittering fantasy and is lavishly staged with splendid scenery and dancing costumes. There is fascination in the conception of the plot which is admirably worked out and was given Thursday evening with a charm that was particularly appealing. The cast included Lawrence Casy, impersonating Captain Trellwater, commander of the Magic Ship, Louis Weiss, Henry Bode, Norman Reeves, Frank

There are some bits of evidence around Putnam that the Fourth of July is near at hand. In spite of the mayor's proclamation to the effect that no fireworks, torpedoes or firecrackers are to be shot off previous to next Monday morning at four o'clock, almost every night prelude celebrations are held in various parts of the city. The police authorities place most of the blame for this upon the shoulders of children who cannot resist the temptation to put out some of the noise makers that they have purchased.

The police were called to the north end of the city a few days ago to investigate, where a resident of a house near Providence street was startled to discover a bullet hole through a window in her home, and to discover a bullet flattened out against her kitchen sink. The police are inclined to believe that someone firing a revolver with what were supposed to be blanks, accidentally got a loaded shell into the barrel.

Another tablet is soon to be put in place by this society on the house in which Israel Putnam was born in Danvers, Mass. The Putnam chapter D. A. R. has voted a sum of money to help pay for this latter marker.
